The Testing (The Testing #1) by Joelle Charbonneau

Set in a post-nuclear dystopia in which university admissions have become prohibitively exclusive, The Testing (2013), American author Joelle Charbonneau's young adult novel, follows Cia Vale, a high school student, who becomes entangled in a violent competition for entry. The novel was widely popular for its resonance with the real-life narrowing of pipelines to universities over the past several decades, which Charbonneau observed as a high school vocal coach.

Parents need to know that The Testing is a dystopian science fiction adventure in the mold of The Hunger Games, but without that series' bloodshed, pessimism, and intensity. There's a fair amount of violence -- including a suicide and a death by nail shot through someone's eye -- but the female teen protagonist in particular does not take any killing lightly.
